Sleep Talk Practice -
A Self Esteem Program
for Children

Most of us become parents without any special training for the role. No one ever tells us that when we receive that bundle wrapped in a pink or blue blanket that, if we live long enough, if we survive the inevitable stresses and mistakes, the best part of parenting is having our children in our life as adults. Children whom we admire and enjoy as adults and who enjoy and admire us.

SleepTalk™, a confidence and self-esteem building program for children, offers unique opportunities for parents to assist children to harmonise and balance their thinking. It empowers all parents to give children positive suggestions to help with general and specific issues. It allows the child to take ownership and responsibility for their own growth, as well as empowering them to deal with traumas, anxiety, separation and stress. SleepTalk™ is about building self-assurance and developing self-confidence.

Young children accept negative suggestions with the same energy as positive suggestions and any suggestions accepted as truth becomes part of the belief system of their subconscious mind. If a child's belief structure is one based largely on fear or lack of confidence, a feeling of rejection or inadequacy, the ensuing decisions made by their conscious mind will of course reflect those beliefs.

The Goulding SleepTalk™ process helps to overcome this by:

- Empowering parents to help their children to achieve self-confidence and inner strength.
- Empowering parents to give their children positive suggestions to help with general and specific issues in their lives.

SleepTalk™ is a process that is taught to the parents and primary care givers. It involves repeating a positive and empowering script to your child whilst they are sleeping which establishes a solid sub-conscious foundation that is based on positive beliefs and unconditional love. Known as the Foundation Process, this enables your child to know that they are loved and lovable, and to help them have the confidence to cope better with their world. Once the Foundation Process is established, (time required for each family will differ), secondary suggestions can be introduced, which are specific to your child's needs. An extensive range of secondary suggestions means that many behavioural patterns, attitudes, and physical symptoms can be addressed. The Goulding SleepTalk™ process is easy to learn, takes parents only a few minutes a night, and it can't be "done wrong". It's absolutely safe, ethical and positive.

The Goulding SleepTalk™ process is for children with difficulties, and children with none. It's for every parent who wants their children to reach their potential, whatever that potential may be, it isn't a cure for illnesses, but a gentle way to enhance children's self-esteem and make their lives more positive. The Goulding SleepTalk™ process is about developing a child's emotional resilience, the mind's firewall, which protects against negative suggestions and fertilises the child's mind with the power of the positive, ultimately giving the child the greatest gift of all: an attitude of happiness and confident self-esteem and enables the child to know that they are loved and lovable and no matter what life deals them that it's okay and they are okay. The SleepTalk™ process helps dreams and goals to be obtained and to establish within a child a positive, confident self image. When a child has a basic belief in self and achieves harmony with their environment the world becomes 'their oyster' and achievement beyond imagination is possible.

The Magnificent Tree
by Nick Bland and
Stephen Michael King

A delightful book about Bonny and her Pop! They both had brilliant ideas – however Pop's weren't always well planned. The pictures in this book tell the story on its own. It is very cleverly illustrated and written. This book would be perfect for a Playgroup Story Time as it has few words, great pictures which would make it quick to read and it's captivating with great illustrations.

Do your Ears Hang Low?
by Topp Twins and
Jenny Cooper

Suited to 0 to 5 year olds.
Wow – I love this book and the song! I've never heard or read the full version before. This book comes with the CD and the pictures are so much FUN. At the end, there are some interesting facts about ears to share. This is a perfect example of an interactive story for toddlers and preschoolers and it's an excellent choice to read and sing at Playgroup!

The Terrible Suitcase
by Emma Allen and Freya Blackwood

Suited for 5 years and over. This book is suited to older children. It's a story about a little girl starting school and her mum bought her a small red suitcase, not a red rocket backpack. The little girl was mad her mum did not listen to her and she was embarrassed to go to school with her suitcase – however by the end of her first day at school her suitcase was popular with everyone!

My Mum's the Best
by Rosie Smith and
Bruce Whatley

Suited to 2 to 4 year olds. I like how the authors used Mummy and baby animals to tell this story – appropriately matching the animals to the actions as to how we might think of the animals; example: 'We hang around' and the picture is of a mummy and baby Orang-utan hanging on a tree branch. A lovely book and ideal to read at Playgroup for Mothers Day!

Tips for looking after yourself and your baby

After the birth of your child, it is important that you also take the time to look after yourself, not just your child.

These suggestions can help to protect your back:

- Have the change table at waist height
- Tighten your pelvis and lower abdominal muscles before lifting and bend your knees
- Have the object being lifted close to your body
- Avoid carrying heavy items:
  - Don't carry a baby bath full of water
  - Limit carrying the baby capsule and avoid twisting

Returning to regular exercise can help you to recover from pregnancy and cope with the demands of parenting. Remember:

- Return gradually (e.g. start with gentle walking)
- A physiotherapist led postnatal exercise class, such as Pilates, can usually be commenced at about six weeks
- Avoid strenuous activities, such as running and heavily resisted exercises for 12-24 weeks after birth

This information is a guide only. You should speak to your Physiotherapist for more specific advice.

PlayConnect

Joining forces for good

Imminent closure of a vital service for children with autism resulted in a unique community resource which benefits all the children involved

When the idea of Universal Access was first proposed last year, it meant extended kindergarten hours for all preschool children. It also heralded sweeping and potentially detrimental changes to a lot of Playgroup services, including PlayConnect, the Playgroup program for families who have children with behaviour on the Autism Spectrum.

One group facing closure was Eden Hills. For nearly 18 months, Eden Hills PlayConnect Playgroup in Southern Adelaide had been quietly meeting every week in Eden Hills Kindergarten, with a steady attendance during the times the premises weren't used by the kindy kids. These sessions provided a vital service to families with a child under five with autism, in Southern Adelaide.

The introduction of Universal Access, however threatened to derail this, as it meant that every child had the right to an increased number of hours of kindergarten per child. So suddenly kindergarten at this venue would be going full-time, leaving no available time slots for PlayConnect at this venue.

A few days of panic ensued before thinking caps were put on to try and find another suitable venue in the area and work out how best to manage the transition and support families through this period.

However after discussions, an unusual idea was proposed: to trial staying in the kindergarten whilst a kindergarten session was in progress.

Some clever strategies were put into place as the new term got underway, vital to ensure that the children attending not only PlayConnect, but kindergarten were not negatively impacted by both using the same space at the same time.

Playgroups SA CEO Carley Jones said: "Our main priority was to ensure that PlayConnect continued – that it was still suitable and appropriate for the children with autism attending, met program objectives and was still a relaxed support service for families. Combining a normal kindergarten session with a group of younger children with autism is quite a task."

Some of the strategies the PlayConnect team employed include:

1. The kindergarten is quite large, so when required there's ample space for the kindergarten session and PlayConnect group to separate, but also maintain routines such as fruit

- time, story time and play time.
2. There's a separate self-contained room allowing for quiet time, like a retreat room. This is also handy for when PlayConnect does a specific activity each week.
  3. The kindergarten staff are flexible and very welcoming to the PlayConnect children, encouraging them to join in, especially with sensory activities such as water and outdoor play. This is also a great opportunity for the children attending PlayConnect to become familiar with other adults in a supportive environment.
  4. The kindergarten uses cues such as music over loud speakers to initiate routine group times. This cue indicates to PlayConnect staff and families that separate PlayConnect time is required. The kindergarten session has fewer children than the PlayConnect numbers as the kindergarten is not at capacity at the time when PlayConnect runs, which allows for ample space and reduced noise.

The Development Worker Naomi Wilkey has monitored the integration of the session and has reported:

- There's been no reported adverse effect on the children attending either session
- The PlayConnect children have adapted and responded to there being more children present during PlayConnect. This can only benefit the PlayConnect children's transition to other services such as school, therapy and other kindergartens.

- There've been many positive effects such as the children attending PlayConnect being introduced to more challenging resources and activities. Prior to the kindergarten session integration, staple items were placed out every week.
- PlayConnect children actively seeking out and joining in the kindergarten activities. One child in particular approaches and joins in the play dough activities - this is a big milestone for a child on the autism spectrum. Frequently the children share the same space and do the same activities.

Much credit must go to PlayConnect's Naomi Wilkey, as well as the PlayConnect families and the kindergarten staff who've worked together to ensure this transition to an integrated service benefits all concerned.

Carley Jones said: "We hope to use our PlayConnect as an example of what can be achieved with some innovative thinking outside the box.

"Without the discussions taking place regarding the future of PlayConnect at the centre, the group would've had a very different look today, possibly in a venue where the opportunities experienced now wouldn't be present. Practical thoughts went into how to make the situation work for all parties, and through this, great things for the ASD children and their families were achieved.

"As it was such a success, Playgroup SA hopes to put some of the lessons learned from Eden Hills into place at other PlayConnect services around the state."
